CE mark granted for first
Inspiration Healthcare developed disposable medical device

Inspiration Healthcare Group plc (AIM: IHC), the global medical device company, is delighted to announce that the Inspire rPAP, a neonatal resuscitation device that it has developed in conjunction with doctors in Sweden has been granted a CE mark*.

The device was invented by Anaesthetists Drs Kjell Nilsson and Thomas Drevhammar in Ostersund Sweden in collaboration with the Neonatal team at the Karolinska Hospital in Stockholm. The device utilises the proven technology reducing the work of breathing imposed on a baby from traditional methods of ventilation. The Inspire rPAP delivers variable flow and pressure to a baby during resuscitation and when this is not needed, delivers nasal continuous positive airway pressure.

An initial usability trial in Sweden has given confidence in the product and the Company now intends an initial launch in the UK and Europe and will file for US registration to be able to market the product globally.

Commenting today, Neil Campbell Inspiration Healthcare's Chief Executive Officer said: "This is the first product we have developed from start to finish as a disposable medical device which has been given a CE mark. It fits perfectly with our "LifeStart" neonatal resuscitation unit and will help the sickest and most fragile babies from the moment they are born. We believe we can improve outcomes for babies by the products we are developing."

* CE marking is a mandatory conformity marking for certain products sold within the European Economic Area (EEA).
